

SALT LAKE MATRONS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Mrs. J. T. Keith and her little daughter Katherine, who will shortly be home after a winter in the southwest

There have frequently been mixups more or less serious resulting from the similarity between a masculine and feminine name, but none could be more provocative of mirth than that in which a local bachelor figured recently. This bachelor, who has a few simoleons as well as years enough for discretion, is always on the lookout for a fair maiden whose charms are new and who is not the proverbial "old story" to him. Some friends who had been pleasant to him had a visitor recently, and Mr. Bachelor saw the name of the supposed fair one and took it for granted that "she" would be a good subject for a little of his latent attention. Calling the hostess to the phone, he said: "Hello! Is this Mrs. Blank? Are you folks available for a little theatre party tomorrow evening? I know I haven't called since your first came, but I thought you'd be informal enough to vouch for me. What do you say to Miss So-and-So and Mr. So-and-So and Mr. Smith for the rest?"

The lady consented, wondering just why she and Miss So-and-So were to be the only ladies in the party, and especially pondering on why this particular bachelor should have been so generous about the matter of men.

The night arrived and Mr. Bachelor presented himself in style to take the hostess, her husband and the visitor to the play. They say he nearly collapsed when he met the genial, fine looking, elderly gentleman whose name he had misunderstood and was presented to him. The theatre party materialized, all right, but the bachelor is still marveling.

Wonderful how independent of one another the sexes do grow. Five of the very most attractive girls in town made up a little scheme by which they should attend a certain wedding in a body. Plans were completed the first thing and the maidens secured their conveyances and held together on the proposition. Of course, invitations to be permitted to accompany each one individually were showered on them later, but true to one another they refused any and all. The consequences were that the men—poor fellows—were obliged to either stay or stay at home. Dividing themselves into the desirables and others they really did both.

Judging by the sign of the ring—and those signs never fail—a certain handsome young widow is to be one of the earliest of the brides. The scramble for the piece of cake with the tiny circlet in it was a spirited one, with lovely girls enough to supply even a rush season for Cupid, but the little god of chance had placed it in the place that fell to the pretty widow. Offers galore were showered on her on the spot, but she looked wise and kept her own counsel as to which she would accept.

The other "sure sign"—the catching of the bride's bouquet—resulted at two of the weddings of the past week on fixing the appropriate time at which two of the fair maidens are to become matrons.

Pure Maple

We are the largest buyers—so we are told—of Vermont Maple Syrup. All our wheat is cooked in it before it is flaked.

Our object is that incomparable flavor. To make Mapl-Flake the most delicious—as it is the most digestible—of all cereal foods.

Taste is of tremendous importance.

With children for instance. The food that is best for them often needs to be forced on them. But they beg for Mapl-Flake. Was there ever a child who did not like maple sugar?

The more Mapl-Flake a child eats the less it will eat of food not so good.

Wheat is the perfect food. But wheat, in most forms, is only partly digestible.

It consists largely of starch. And starch, to be digestible, must be made soluble. The particles must be separated so the digestive juices can get to them.

That requires a process of 96 hours, and Mapl-Flake alone employs it.

Our wheat is steam-cooked for six hours; then cured. Then flaked so thin that the full heat of our ovens gets to each atom. Then the flakes are toasted for 30 minutes in a heat of 400 degrees.

This process is expensive, but we know it to be essential. The result is, every granule of starch is separated. Every atom is made digestible. The food is all food.

That is why Mapl-Flake is the most economical food, though a package costs 15 cents. The cream costs no more than on 10-cent foods, and cream is the main expense.

So please don't go without the food that you like best, thinking to save five cents.
